ALLIES ON EDGE FOR SMASHING BLOW AT GENERAL VON KLUCK'S HARRASSED ARMY; RUSSIANS MAY SETTLE FATE OF GERMANY

ALLIES PUSHING STEADILY ON, BUT LINES ARE FIRM

Germans Batter the Enemy Without Finding a Weak Spot.

LONG CAMPAIGN IN THE EAST

Germans Are Preparing for Series of Sieges Against Russians, Similar to Those That Have Marked the Campaign in France; Austria Menaced.

By Associated Press.

LONDON, October 5.—The fact that fighting is in progress in and around the town of Douai, midway between Arras and Valenciennes, on the railroad to Mons, is taken in London to show how surely the allies in northern France have pushed the forward movement they hope will envelop General von Kluck, the commander of the German right wing, in a net of steel.

For the past week the Germans so far as can be ascertained from the few facts known in London, have been vainly hurling themselves against different points in the allied line in an effort to discover a weak mesh in the net. At the present time in the view of General Joffre, commander-in-chief of the French forces, the process of attrition has gone far enough to justify the resumption of offensive movements on the part of the allies as is announced in the latest communication from French headquarters.

Apparently the intention now is to attempt something decisive against the German right wing and if possible bring to an end this contest which for magnitude and stubbornness is without precedent in history.

The series of highlands stretching north and south along the allies' right and left are the master keys of the battle and a considerable force from overseas and elsewhere has been pushed up to secure control of them.

At Soissons the German trenches already have been captured, but the Germans continue to fight fiercely and are still attacking at this point as elsewhere along the entire line of battle, which their latest official report asserts is going in their favor, just as confidently as General Joffre maintains the contrary.

In the eastern theatre of the war the Germans would appear, according to English observers, to be contemplating a period of defense before undertaking the offensive. They are busily engaged between Thorn, in East Prussia, and Galicia in entrenching themselves against the Russian hosts gathering on the other side of the frontier.

It is calculated that there are no fewer than 1,000,000 fighting men in this eastern arena and a repetition of the long and arduous siege battles which have been such a feature of the struggle in France seems a certainty.

The Russians continue to push eastward on Cracow, evidently with the hope of getting thence to Breslau, and they go on stretching their tentacles southward toward Budapest. Cossacks are well in on the plains of Hungary. Even Budapest admits that they have crossed the river Theiss, which was regarded as one of the main obstacles to their progress. By getting across the railroad at Szigeth they secured the second line leading to the Hungarian capital. They had already seized the Lemberg-Budapest line at Uchver.

THREE FORTS TAKEN IN SIEGE OF ANTWERP.

By Associated Press.

BERLIN, via wireless to Sayville, L. I., Oct. 5.—An official report from the German army headquarters says that in the siege of Antwerp the forts of Lierre, Waelhem and Koningshoyckt and the intermediate redoubts with 30 guns have been taken.

"Thus a breach has been made in the outer circle of forts," the report adds, "rendering an attack on the inner circle and town itself possible."

"Near Augustowo the third Siberian and parts of the Twenty-second army corps, composing the left wing of the Russian army in crossing the Nieman were defeated after a furious battle lasting two days. More than 2,000 Russians were taken and a large quantity of guns and machine guns were captured."

Other press matter given out in official quarters says "Corps of native troops from India which recently landed at Marseilles have left there for the north. British ships have arrived at Lisbon and are probably destined to transport Portuguese troops.

Portugal's co-operation in the war is imminent, the mobilization of the Portuguese forces, it is believed, having been ordered on the demand of the British Government.

"England is sowing mines in several parts of the North Sea and a warning to this effect has been given to neutral shipping.

"The Roumanian crown prince has been rebuked for his Russophile agitation. The leaders of the Roumanian parties declare themselves in favor of continuing a neutral policy. A manifesto issued by the Roumanian socialists assumes that the neutrality of the country will be preserved, condemns the Russophile propaganda, and emphasizes the dangerous position of Russia.

"The government of the Netherlands has strengthened the Dutch forts along the frontier districts to disarm Belgian troops when the latter cross the frontier from Antwerp.

"According to a statement made by his eminence Cardinal Bettinger, the highest Roman Catholic authority in Bavaria, the statement appearing in English and American newspapers that priests have been killed by German soldiers while attending the wounded in Belgium are to be considered as absolutely without foundation.

It is also declared that the English correspondents overlook the fact that a large portion of the German army is Roman Catholic. A manifesto signed by prominent savants and artists indignantly protests against what is termed unceasing lies about the pretended barbarous warfare of the Germans.

"The leader of the American government commission sent to Germany on board the cruiser Tennessee to prepare for the return of American tourists has sent a letter to Franz von Mendelsohn and the German American Relief Committee highly praising the German nation in arms and thanking them for innumerable proofs of kindness."

FURIOUS FIGHTING ON LEFT WING, FRENCH REPORT.

By Associated Press

PARIS, Oct. 5.—The following official communication was given out today:

"On our left wing to the north of the Oise, the battle continues with great violence. The result remains indecisive. We have been obliged at certain points to yield ground. Along the remainder of the front there has been no change.

"In Russia after a battle which lasted 10 days, the German army, which was operating between the Eastern Prussian front and the Nieman river, has been driven back along the entire line and made its retreat abandoning a quantity of war material. This army has evacuated completely the territory of the Russian provinces of Suwalki and Lomja."

GERMAN NIGHT ATTACK REPULSED BY JAPS

By Associated Press.

TOKIO, October 5.—It is officially announced that the German infantry at Tsing-Tau delivered a surprise night attack against the Japanese, but were repulsed. The Germans had 18 killed and the Japanese 5 killed and 8 wounded.

The cannonading on land and sea in the vicinity of Tsing-Tau continues. Four Japanese shells hit the German gunboat Iltis, which retired to the inner harbor after the exchange of shots.

COUNT VON BERNSTORFF VISITS BRYAN'S OFFICE

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, called at the state department today and conferred with Secretary Bryan for half an hour. When he left, the ambassador carried copies of the new peace treaty between the United States and Great Britain, France, Russia, China and nearly a score of other countries. Such a treaty was proposed to Germany some time ago.

The ambassador declined to discuss his call. He returned recently from New York and had not seen Secretary Bryan for several weeks.

CARNAGE TERRIBLE, SAYS AMERICAN ARMY OFFICER

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Lieutenant A. Ellicott Brown, U. S. A., who visited the battlefield of Meux just after the fighting, reached New York today aboard the steamship Minnetonka with a vivid description of the battlefield.

So great had been the carnage, he said, that within a radius of 600 yards he saw 1,000 dead Germans. The bayonet charges of the allies, he said, were responsible for the great slaughter as the German soldiers were so strongly entrenched that they could be dislodged in no other way.

"I saw Captain Parker of the United States army while I was in France," Lieutenant Brown said, "and he told me that the German army's retreat from its near approach to Paris had been a perfect military movement and that he had seen but one dead German left behind.

"The German soldiers are friendly to the French peasants," he said, "and he found no traces of atrocities although he had heard much about them."

Buying Horses for War.

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., October 5.—British agents resumed the buying of horses here today. They have orders to buy 10,000 head and have placed an order for 500 a week. The French are buying horses here at the rate of 450 a day.

REAL CRISIS IS NOW IN EAST

Emperor Nicholas Goes to Front, Where Kaiser is Now Reported to Be; Germans Plan to Capture Warsaw and Flank Russians Fails.

By Associated Press.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 4, via London, Oct. 5.—In Russian military circles it is felt that the Russian general staff is now able to analyze and will be able to forestall the intended German invasion of Russia.

In spite of the great importance of the eight day battle between General Rennenkampf on the Russian side, and General von Hindenburg on the German side, which has just come to an end, and in which the Germans were not only not successful in crossing the river Nieman, according to reports here, but were driven back with heavy losses to the frontier, losing the entire province of Suwalki, excepting the town of that name, it is the opinion of Russian observers that the Germans intended this costly and futile demonstration to draw the Russian troops from East Poland as a preliminary to their main object.

This, as revealed by the present fighting near Warsaw, was an attempt to take Warsaw and thence move to the southward to outflank the Russian army which, having occupied Galicia, is now moving through Bukowina into Hungary. It is declared here that this intent has been made impossible by the bad condition of the roads. The heavy German artillery sank into the roadways and could not go on; nor has the German attempt to take the offensive at Cracow thus far been productive.

The reported presence of Emperor William in East Prussia and the departure of Emperor Nicholas for the front is taken here to emphasize the tremendous importance of the pending battle which may be the biggest conflict of the war up to the present in either the western or the eastern arenas. Three million men, it is estimated in Petrograd, will be engaged.

Russians believe that if the German-Austrian army is defeated at Cracow the war will be virtually ended. Granted this defeat, they declare there will then be insufficient forces left to stem the Russian invasion of Silesia and thence to Breslau and Berlin, as well as the Russian advance through Cracow to Vienna and through Transylvania to Budapest.

MONTENEGRINS ROUTED BY A SMALL AUSTRIAN FORCE.

By Associated Press

LONDON, October 5.—A correspondent at Amsterdam transmits the following official statement from Vienna signed by Field Marshal Potiorek:

"The Servian and Montenegrin forces invading East Bosnia have compelled us to detach mobile forces to this region which is far from the arena of the principal decision. The first action started in East Bosnia already has come to a successful termination.

"Two Montenegrin brigades, after two days of severe fighting, were completely defeated and repulsed. They now are in a panicky retreat across the border and they must leave behind them their transports, together with a considerable quantity of supplies. These forces had previously looted Bosnia.

"In the action undertaken in the northern part of the country half a battalion of Austrian troops captured a full battalion of Servians."

SERVIANS NOW AT FORTS OF BOSNIA'S CAPITAL.

By Associated Press.

PARIS, October 5.—A dispatch from Nish brings the following official statement:

"Servian troops in Bosnia have approached the fortifications protecting Sarajevo, the capital. The Austrians who occupy the heights on the right bank of the Drina are suffering a lack of provisions.

"On October 2, near Klenak, on the Save the Austrians attacked their own troops.

Eight Dead in Mine Explosion.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 5.—Eight men are known to be dead and 12 injured as a result of a local explosion in the Mulga mines of the Woodward Iron Company, 18 miles northwest of Birmingham this morning.

FOREST FIRES ADD TO THE LOSSES CAUSED BY DROUGHT

The menace of forest fires has been added to the losses in this section already caused by the severe drought. The mountains are so dry that should a fire get started it would probably burn fiercely. Already the mountains are aflame in one spot. Near Laurelville, on Chestnut Ridge, near the Fayette-Westmoreland-Somerset line, fire is burning furiously. It has been raging for several days and at night the reflection of the flames can be seen for miles. Scores of parties from that section make pilgrimages nightly in autos, buggies and by foot to witness the spectacle of the burning timber and underbrush.

Scientific weather forecasts and the old-time ring around the moon, combine in predicting that the long drought will be broken by heavy and continuous rains this week. The official weather man says the rain may be delayed until Tuesday; but the ring around the moon, while not designating the coming of the rain on any particular day, nevertheless, indicates that it is coming without fail.

There were two rings about the moon last night, one small one and an immense circle, enclosing an expanse of blue, unbroken by clouds.

The rain never was quite so badly needed. The streams are low, stagnant pools replacing running brooks, and the dust is at least half a foot deep along the roads. A more unhealthy condition could hardly be created, physicians say, yet disease is not unusually prevalent. The Yough river was down to .25 foot on Sunday night, the lowest stage in two years. It had risen to .35 foot, however, this morning.

The official forecast calls for showers tonight, but the half week forecast is more definite. It says "over the lower lake region, the Middle Atlantic states and New England, the rains may be delayed until Tuesday or Wednesday, and then continue until near the end of the week with somewhat lower temperature by that time."

The drought at present is one of the severest in the history of this section. Coke yards, railroads and all industrial plants feel the scarcity of water keenly, and farmers are in despair.

NEW TICKET AGENT

Confluence Man to be Night Man at B. & O. Passenger Station.

William A. Burnworth, ticket agent for the Baltimore & Ohio at Confluence is on duty at the Connellsville office preparing himself to assume the position of night ticket agent here.

Hitherto, the night ticket selling has been done by one of the telegraph operators, but this has come to conflict with the eight-hour law and it has been decided to establish the position of night agent. The number of trains that stop here during the night has also made this position necessary.

Mr. Burnworth, in his capacity of ticket agent at Confluence, has had sufficient experience to qualify himself for the new position, which is in the nature of a promotion.

PLAN MINING CLASS.

Mount Pleasant to Have Branch of Pittsburg University Extension.

Special to The Courier.

MOUNT PLEASANT, October 5.—The University of Pittsburg through its new extension plan, proposes establishing a mining class at Mount Pleasant for the benefit of the community. Work will be advanced studies in mining, including preparation for fire boss, assistant mine foreman and mine foreman examinations next spring. No charge will be made for the instruction except expenses of instructor.

A meeting for explaining the class and organizing one will be held in the old brick school house, North Shupe street on Tuesday evening, October 6, at 7.30 o'clock.

VIOLENT EARTHQUAKE.

Two Turkish Towns Are Severely Damaged.

By Associated Press.

SMYRNA, Asiatic Turkey, Oct. 4, via London, Oct. 5.—The towns of Isbarta, population about 25,000, and Burdurm, population about 12,000, in the province of Konia were severely damaged by an earthquake last midnight. The loss of life was heavy.

These two towns are centers of the carpet industry.

MUST SHOW PASSES.

Mere Request for Slip Won't Help West Penn Employes.

West Penn employes have been notified that hereafter holders of card passes must exhibit them to conductors, instead of merely signing the identification slips.

A notice issued to all heads of departments states that this has become necessary because pass holders have been using their free transportation beyond the fare limits allowed on it.

EIGHT DWELLINGS ARE DESTROYED IN CONFLUENCE FIRE

Mountain Town is Visited by a Serious Blaze.

WATER SHORTAGE A HANDICAP

Pressure is Not Sufficient to Enable the Firemen to Save More Than One House of Nine Which Ignite; Cause Mystery; Suspect Incendiary.

Fire swept the "seven row" in Confluence early this morning and spread to nearby property with the result that eight dwellings were destroyed and a ninth was saved by great effort on the part of the firemen. Because of the drought the water supply was inadequate. The firemen were hampered because they could not throw a stream higher than the second story windows of the burning buildings. The "seven row" is a block of seven two-story frame dwellings.

Only two of the nine dwellings were occupied. The fire started in the vicinity of Roy Lytle's home. Lytle lived in the house at the extreme lower end of the "seven row." He is a coal shoveler of the Baltimore & Ohio and an early riser. He and his wife and their several children escaped in safety and were able to save much of their household goods. Alfred Fisher, who lived in a house near the "seven row," also moved his household goods, but his property was destroyed. The flames also attacked another house in that neighborhood, but it was saved.

The "seven row" is owned by Kimmel Fike of Braddock. F. R. Beggs is agent for the properties. He said they were insured. A man named Shoaf of Pittsburg owned the vacant house which was damaged somewhat by the flames. The total loss is approximately $6,000.

Virtually the entire town turned out to fight the flames and the volunteers did excellent work against great odds. The "seven row" was a mass of flames by the time the firemen reached the scene. They turned their attention then to preventing the flames from spreading. The cause of the fire is not known. One report is that it started in the Lytle home, but the general belief is that an incendiary is to blame.

WATER SHORT, SMITHTON FIREMEN USE BEER

In addition to water and chemicals, the people of Smithton resorted to beer to quench the fire which threatened to destroy the town on Saturday afternoon. The teams of the Eureka Brewing Company hauled several loads of barrels, some containing beer, but the majority water. The success of the beer is not mentioned in accounts of the fire.

The total loss was four stables, two garages, several outbuildings. Jeffries & Hepler's blacksmith shop and the Crouse drug store were only partly gutted.

PRAY FOR PEACE

Prayers for the ending of the great European war were offered in virtually all the churches yesterday in accordance with a request from President Woodrow Wilson that yesterday be set aside as a National Peace Day.

A special program was carried out at the First Presbyterian Church. Rev. J. L. Proudfit read the President's call for prayer against war, and at the morning services preached on "And On Earth Peace." Appropriate music was rendered by the church choir.

Rev. C. C. Buckner, pastor of the Christian Church, chose "Peace and Prayer" as the subject of his sermon. Rev. Wilbur Nelson, pastor of the First Baptist Church, preached on "He Maketh Wars to Cease," while Rev. C. E. Wagner of the Trinity Reformed Church chose as his subject "What Shall Our Nation and Its Churches Pray For? What It Is All About and What It Means."

PASTORS ASSIGNED.

Free Methodists of Pittsburg District Close Conference.

The announcement of the appointments of ministers was a feature of the closing session of the Pittsburg conference of the Free Methodist Church at Butler Saturday by Bishop Walter A. Sellew.

Among the appointments were: Connellsville, Bridgeport and Stauffer, F. M. Hendricks; Mount Pleasant, L. N. Campbell; West Brownsville, W. Ward, supply; Uniontown, Alma Miller.

GETS BIG BASS.

M. F. Ridenour Lands One 14 Inches Long.

M. F. Ridenour, while fishing near Confluence Saturday, caught eight bass, one of which measured about 14 inches. A fisherman from Pittsburg caught one measuring 18 inches.

E. B. Ridenour, West Penn motorman, and wife and Mrs. W. S. Stimmell of the West Side are fishing in the Indian Creek streams today.

Trolleys Delayed.

A trolley wire which fell on the main line of the West Penn railroad at Greensburg yesterday evening, delayed traffic for a short time and threw the schedule out of order.

NEGRO TRIES TO STEAL AN AUTO; SMASHES IT; BOLTS

Runs Off After Colliding With Wagon on Bridge; Had Tried to Swipe Another.

While attempting to steal Dr. S. G. McCune's automobile, which was parked on Apple street, a negro drove the machine into the wagon of the American Express Company on the Yough bridge, shortly before noon. Leaving the damaged machine, the negro ran across the bridge and disappeared down First street.

The automobile was identified by G. E. Albrecht of the Wells-Mills garage, as that of Dr. S. G. McCune, and taken to the garage for repairs. In the collision, the car suffered a bent axle, a broken wheel, broken lights, and a puncture.

The same negro had previously cranked the car of Dr. T. R. Francis, but was chased away before he succeeded in getting away with it. He was not a skillful driver, for in rounding the turn at Arch street, he got caught in the trolley rails and punctured a tire.

Mr. Albrecht of the Wells-Mills company warns auto owners to lock their switches and put the keys in their pockets when leaving their cars. This will prevent them from being stolen, for it is impossible to run off with a dead car. These attempts today are the first in a long time to steal an automobile here.

VISIT TREASURE CAVE

School Children Invade Mountains; Rich in Legend.

Special to The Courier.

MOUNT PLEASANT, October 5.—Miss Margery Stewart took the botany class of high school out on Saturday to study. The class went up by Laurelville and while the girls studied leaves the boys went to Rollys cave. This cave carries a history with it.

The older generation tell a story that this man Rolly was a desperado and lived near Laurelville before trains ran through here or railroads were built. The pike past this man's home was the road from Philadelphia to Pittsburg and all stage coaches or drovers had to pass this road. Rolly was blamed with killing a number of them and burying the money stolen from them. One day a drover was killed and his son swore to kill Rolly. As the drover's son approached the cabin Rolly was asleep. Making a plea for his life Rolly offered the boy more loot than he could haul in a four horse team. The boy refused and killed Rolly.

The cave is of soft sand stone formation and is quickly falling in, as the sandstone crumbles. A short time ago some boys were cutting out around and about 150 feet away from the main cave, they fell directly in the mouth of a smaller cave. The place is infested with large rats. It is believed gold is buried there and a number of attempts have been made to locate it.

POLICE SHIFTED

Mayor Assigns Cops to New Beats Around Town.

Mayor Marietta today decided on another shift in the police force. Hereafter, Patrolman George Washabaugh will go on duty at 6 o'clock in the morning and remain until 6 at night, as cornerman. A. A. Geiker will take the noon to midnight turn, spending the afternoon on the West Side and the night on this side of the river.

James Francis succeeds George Gregg on the South Side, Gregg becoming the night cornerman. Frank Gnaot takes the night beat on the north and east ends. Thomas McDonald comes on duty at 8 P. M. and makes his rounds on Water street and part of the north end, in addition to acting as desk sergeant in the early morning hours. J. D. Murphy remains on the West Side at night.

212 HOURS IN LOCKUP.

Zimmerman Finally Released After a Long Imprisonment in City Hall.

After serving about 212 hours, or nearly nine days in the city lockup, Edward Zimmerman was released Sunday morning on order of Alderman Fred Munk. He had been committed for 10 days on a charge of stealing brass from the Baltimore & Ohio railroad yards, but no move was made by the railroad police to take him to jail, so the alderman, for humanity's sake, directed that he be let go.

Zimmerman was originally arrested on Friday, September 26, but was not given a hearing until a week later. He protested vigorously against being confined in the lockup that length of time, for the lockup fare is but buns and water, while in jail, you get soup and other dainties.

TRIED TO BURN BARN.

Bullskin Township Farmer Tells the Police of Incendiary Effort.

Franklin Fosbrink, a farmer of Bullskin township, reported to the police yesterday that someone had tried to burn his large barn near Gilmore's Mills some time Saturday night.

Mr. Fosbrink said that at 6:30 o'clock Saturday evening when he locked up for the night, everything was all right, but on Sunday morning a piece of newspaper half-burned and a charred corn sack were found. There were traces of kerosene about the floor.

Glenn in Again.

Thomas Glenn of Scottdale, who was in jail at Uniontown for a while on suspicion of having held up a South Connellsville trolley car several weeks ago, was arrested here again on Saturday and committed for 72 hours by the mayor yesterday.

REGISTRATION OF VOTERS SATISFIES POLITICAL CHIEFS

First Enrollment of Voters Here Falls Little Short.

1,971 VOTERS HAVE QUALIFIED

Nearly 800 Turn Out on Saturday, the Last Day; 2,200 Voted in the City Election of 1913, Indicating That Some 200 Failed to Qualify.

The first registration of voters under the third class city law was generally satisfactory to the political leaders. Although somewhat below the normal vote, the total enrollment was better than had been anticipated. On the three days for registering, 1,971 qualified to vote at the November election, 540 on the first, 659 on the second and 769 on the third. The registration was as follows:

Ward	Sept. 3	Sept. 15	Oct. 3	Tot.
First	103	72	86	261
Second	76	97	97	270
Third	68	153	187	408
Fourth	71	107	107	285
Fifth	73	91	95	259
Sixth	69	53	124	246
Seventh	80	89	73	242
Total	540	659	769	1971

There was a noticeable falling off in six of the wards and a gain in but one. The West Side did particularly well, especially the Sixth on Saturday, when 124 enrolled, bringing the total for that ward up to 246. The Seventh with 242 names, has practically the entire vote enrolled.

Only one ward returned an enrollment greater than the vote for mayor at the election last fall. This was the First, where there are eight more voters registered than voted for mayor in 1913. The greatest loss was in the Third ward, where there was a falling off of 55. The Third continues the largest ward in town, with 408 voters registered. There have been times when more than 600 have voted in the Third, but the Democratic machine then held it in a firm grip and handled things largely as it pleased. It is predicted that this year the Third ward will "come clean."

The Fourth ward registration fell 52 below the mayoralty vote last fall, and the Fifth ward 48. There were fewer voters to qualify in the Third, by 30. The West Side registration was about normal, 29 fewer registering in the Sixth than voted last fall for mayor, and 22 in the Seventh.

In spite of the fact that there was a falling off in six of the seven wards, the registration was entirely satisfactory. There was apparently but little effort made by the Democrats to get out a vote. The Republican workers in several wards were busy, but had to do little urging to get members of that faith to register.

No effort was made to record the party preference in most of the wards. It was not made a compulsory question. Some of the voters volunteered their politics and were enrolled. The Republicans predominated. Approximately 200 of the 242 voters registering in the Seventh ward are Republicans. The Sixth also has an overwhelming preponderance of Republicans. There is every indication that this will be a big Republican year.

SCHOOL BOARD TO MEET

Action on President's Resignation Will be Taken Tonight.

School board meets tonight in regular session. Outside of the routine business, the most important matter is the consideration of the resignation of President F. E. Younkin, who announced his intention of stepping down rather than sign the new gas contract.

Whether Mr. Younkin's resignation will be accepted, and whether, if it is not, he can be forced to serve, are two important propositions, one of which is up to the members, and the other to Solicitor H. George May. Mr. Younkin claims to have looked into the legal status of the case and found that he cannot be compelled to be president if he does not want to.

FARMER HANGS SELF.

Native of Belgium Found Suspended From Rafter in His Kitchen.

Emil Collet, a Belgian, was found hanging from the rafters in the kitchen of his home at Wood Glenn, near Perryopolis, yesterday morning. He had fastened a strap about his neck, fastened one end to the rafters and then lifted his feet from the floor. He was in a kneeling position when found.

Beside the body was a letter addressed to his brother, in which he told him not to worry as everything about the farm was in good shape. Deceased was 56 years old and lived alone.

CRAMER SENTENCED.

Goes to Pen from 5 to 8 Years for Murder of Trimpey.

SOMERSET, Oct. 5.—Judge Ruppel today sentenced Henry C. Cramer to spend not less than 5 nor more than 8 years in the penitentiary for the murder of William H. Trimpey at Kingwood last June.

Cramer's counsel urged that Cramer be given only a jail sentence, on the ground that mercy was recommended by the jury.

The costs of the case, which must be paid by Cramer, will amount to about $1,000.

CRIPPLE INJURED.

Tries to Board a Freight Train While Intoxicated.

Frank Anderson of Pittsburg, who is minus one leg and uses two crutches to get about, tried to board a freight train at the Baltimore & Ohio station on Saturday. He fell, but luckily his remaining leg did not get under the wheels, though his crutches did and were broken up.

The man was drunk, but he was taken to the Cottage State Hospital for an injury to his head. When he arrived there he began to abuse the nurses and it was finally necessary to arrest him and haul him to the lockup in a wagon.

VISITS HIS NIECE.

Cumberland Man Sees Mrs. Dougherty First Time in 26 Years.

DEATHS.

Mrs. Arthur Collins.

Following an illness dating back to last February, Mrs. Anna Louise Collins, 33 years old, wife of Arthur Collins, died Saturday afternoon about 3 o'clock at her home on North First street, West Side. She had been confined to her bed for the past month. Funeral services Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, with Rev. W. J. Everhart, pastor of the United Presbyterian Church, officiating. Many friends and relatives attended and there were a number of handsome floral tributes. Appropriate music was rendered by members of the church choir. The pallbearers were Wilmer Cameron, George Myers, Carl Soutz and Denton Crowley. Interment in Hill Grove Cemetery.

Mrs. Collins was a daughter of Christian Smith, deceased, and Mrs. Agnes Smith, and was born in Dunbar. At the age of 18 months she came to the West Side with her parents and resided there until her death. Sixteen years ago she was married to Arthur Collins, of the West Side, who, with one son James Collins, 15 years old, survive. Her mother, one sister, and two brothers, Mrs. J. R. Dunston, John H. Smith of Connellsville, and F. H. Smith of the West Side, also survive. Her father died 10 years ago. Mrs. Collins was widely known and was held in high esteem by her friends.

Margaret O'Toole.

Margaret O'Toole, 10 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin O'Toole of Trotter, died yesterday of scarlet fever. Private interment this morning in St. Joseph's cemetery.

Mrs. Crissey Buried.

The funeral of Mrs. Elizabeth Crissey took place yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence of her son-in-law, E. M. Grose on Fairview avenue. Rev. Conley, pastor of South Connellsville Evangelical Church, and Rev. E. B. Burgess, pastor of the Trinity Lutheran Church, officiating. Interment in Hill Grove Cemetery.

COLUMBUS MARTIN, FARMER, IS FOUND DEAD IN FIELD

Well Known Perry Township Resident is a Victim of Heart Failure.

Columbus Martin, 80 years old, a prominent farmer of Fayette county, was found dead in a field near his home near Perryopolis Saturday evening by his daughter Edna, and O. E. Luce of Perryopolis, when the latter called at the Martin home to purchase a calf.

His body was found about 150 feet from the barn. In his hand he held a rope which was used in tying the calf and it is believed he had gone to the field to secure the calf when death overtook him. He was carried to the Martin home and friends were summoned.

Saturday afternoon Mr. Martin attended a sale at Wick Haven and on his return stopped at Perryopolis to make a few purchases. For a man of his advanced years he was apparently in good health.

Mr. Martin was born in Perry township and spent virtually all his life there. He was a son of Edward Martin. In his early youth Mr. Martin went to California at the time of the gold excitement, where, it is said, he amassed quite a fortune. He later returned to Missouri and at the outbreak of the Civil War he enlisted in the Missouri State Militia. While serving in the company he took part in several skirmishes in that state. Mrs. Martin died several years ago. One daughter, Edna, survives. Funeral services tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

GET TACKLING DUMMY.

High School Secures Figure for Football Training.

Through the efforts of J. B. Marietta the shoemaker, high school has been supplied with something it needed very badly to train the football squad—a tackling dummy. The finances of the athletic association were not healthy enough to purchase one so Mr. Marietta made one.

The dummy will be rigged up on Fayette Field today and the football squad will be given nightly practice at tackling it. The figure is so arranged that it has to be hit mighty hard before it is brought down. A pit will be fixed up, so that the boys will not be hurt in falling.

NOT DRUGS

Food Did It.

After using laxative and cathartic medicines from childhood a case of chronic constipation yielded to the scientific, Grape-Nuts, in a few days.

"From early childhood I suffered with such terrible constipation that I had to use laxatives continuously going from one drug to another and suffering more or less all the time.

"A prominent physician whom I consulted told me the muscles of the digestive organs were weakened and could not perform their work without help of some kind, so I have tried at different times about every laxative and cathartic known, but found no help that was at all permanent. I had finally become discouraged and had given my case up as hopeless when I began to use the pre-digested food, Grape-Nuts.

"Although I had not expected this food to help my trouble, to my great surprise Grape-Nuts digested easily from the first and in a few days I was convinced that this was just what my system needed.

"The bowels performed their functions regularly and I am now completely and permanently cured of this awful trouble.

"Truly the power of scientific food must be unlimited." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Trial 10 days of Grape-Nuts, when regular food does not seem to sustain the body works wonders. "There's a Reason."

HEARING POSTPONED

Special to The Courier.

UNIONTOWN, Oct. 5.—Only a few witnesses were examined in court today when the probe was begun into the alleged illegal registration in Redstone election district No. 3. One 16-year-old negro admitted that he was on the book and several foreigners testified they had been listed on the strength of their first papers. The hearing was then continued until Thursday because of the absence of Attorney W. J. Sturgis, of counsel for the defense.

Attorney Higbee today filed a petition attacking the validity of some 500 names on the registry lists of Redstone No. 1 and Luzerne No. 5, which adjoins the districts already under fire.

YOUR BLOOD is the canal of life but it becomes a sewer if clogged up. All life consists of building up and tearing down and just in the same manner that the blood carries to the various parts of the body the food that the cells need for building up, so it is compelled to carry away the waste material that's torn down. These waste materials are poisonous and destroy us unless the liver and kidneys are stimulated into refreshed and vigorous life.

Cured His Obesity.

Peter the Great was once traveling incognito in a part of Finland when he met a very fat man, who told him that he was going to St. Petersburg.

"What for?" asked the czar.

"To consult a doctor about being so fat, which has become very oppressive."

"Do you know any doctor there?"

"No."

"Then I will give you a line to my friend, Prince Menschikoff, and he will introduce you to one of the emperor's physicians."

The traveler went to the prince's house with a note. The answer was not delayed. The next day, tied hands and feet, the poor man was dragged off on a cart to the mines.

Two years after Peter the Great was visiting the mines. He had forgotten the incident of the fat man, when suddenly a miner threw down his pick, rushed up to him and fell at his feet, crying:

"Grace, grace, what is it I have done?"

Peter looked at him, astonished, until he remembered the story.

"Oh, so that is you!" he said. "I hope you are pleased with me. Stand up. How thin and slight you have become! Go, and remember that work is the best cure for your complaint!"

How Do You Laugh?

Refinement can be indicated as strongly by the manner in which a person laughs as by the tone of the speaking voice.

If some people could hear the tone they use while laughing they would doom themselves to perpetual sadness.

A real hearty laugh is like a tonic to the system. It not only does the person good who enjoys it, but it does every one good who hears it.

Of such a laugh there is no criticism. But there are people who do not enjoy laughing, but who laugh in a forced and artificial manner, and generally at the most impossible moment.

An affected laugh by either a man or a woman is a counterfeit of the true feelings. There is no necessity to laugh loudly, the heartiest laugh is the softest in tone.

Remember, when laughter is natural it is irresistible and beautiful, and when it is forced it falls like rasping brass upon refined ears.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Brazil's Name.

Long before the Portuguese colonized the coast of Brazil adventurous Bristol merchants had equipped expeditions in a vain search for the supposed island of Brasylle. Who gave Brazil her present name is unknown to fame—the early Portuguese called it Terra da Vera Cruz—but whoever baptized the country took the name from the East Indies. For many years before the discovery of Brazil merchants had brought from the east for the use of dyers a wood which yielded a beautiful red color—brasill or brasilly. The West Indies have trees of the same sort, but Brazil contains them in more abundance than any other country. So that Brazil wood is not called so after the country. The country is named so because of its red dye trees.—London Chronicle.

Publicity.

"It's a bad thing to talk about your neighbors."

"That's right," replied the man who is all business. "Publicity is worth something these days. I shouldn't think of talking about anybody except at advertising rates."—Washington Star.

Another Recipe.

Aspiring Novelist—Ah, sir, I am highly flattered, I'm sure, to hear that you take my book to bed with you and read it there! Acquaintance—Yes, I have been troubled with insomnia for a long time, and I find one of your pages much better than any medicine.

THE SOISSON.

THE FAY FOSTER COMPANY.

There is one bright feature of the Fay Foster Company that will appear at the Soisson Theatre, Tuesday, October 6 that will appeal to all amusement patrons who appreciate a good wholesome laughing show without any dialogue of a risky nature. There is no need of the management of the theatre sitting out the first performance and with a blue pencil eliminating the sulphuric atmosphere or mucky dialogue for no such things are permitted in this company. The comedians are all well known and of established reputations and in their efforts to entertain use only legitimate methods. The Fay Foster Company offers an entertainment that appeals to every lover of pure unadulterated fun.

"THE BEGGAR PRINCE" TODAY.

"The Beggar Prince," a four reel romantic drama, is a strong picture and one that everybody will like. "The Man Who Was Misunderstood," is a two reel drama of intense interest with King Baggot in the leading role. Another feature picture is "The Mistress of Deadwood Basin." A Joker comedy, "For the Hand of Jane," is a big laughing hit. Wednesday, Hazel Dawn will appear in "One of Our Girls," a great Famous picture.

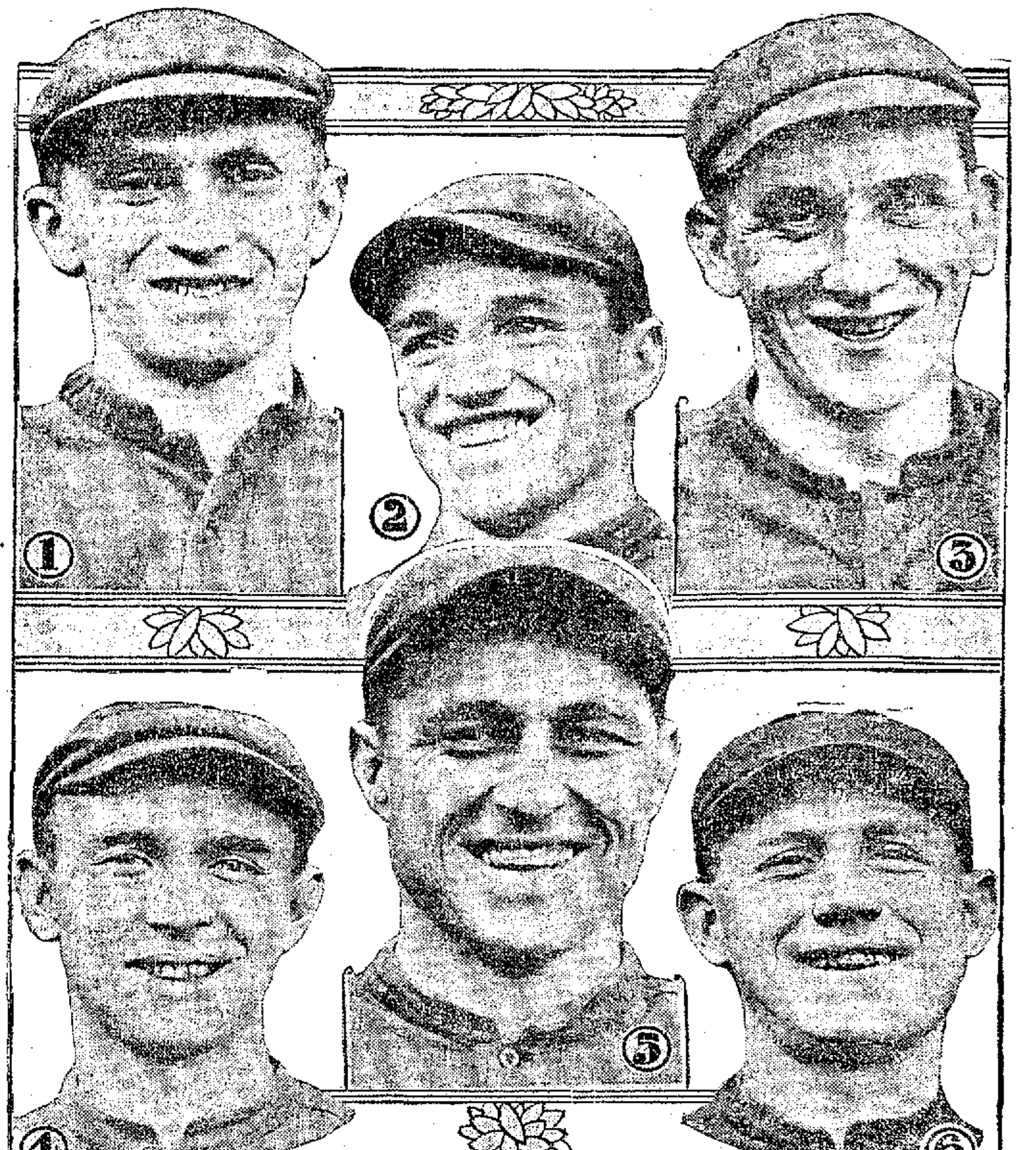
The Boston Braves Have Smiling Faces, Perhaps Because of the World's Series



1. DAVIS. 2. CONNOLLY. 3. MARANVILLE. 4. RUDOLPH. 5. SCHMIDT. 6. CATHER.

The Boston Braves have smiling faces these days. Look at them. There is Dick Rudolph, the star pitcher, who will probably officiate in the first game. His smile looks confident. And see Connolly's grin. He is probably thinking of how he will take "Home Run" Baker's honors away from him. Connolly can do it, too, if Plank and Bender and the other Athletic twirlers will only pitch so he can hit the ball. And "Rabbit" Maranville, who shortstops for the Braves—he is also grinning. He knows what he can do with that extra $3,000 or $4,000 he is to receive. "Butch" Schmidt, who owns a half dozen butcher shops in Baltimore and has an income of perhaps $3,000 a year besides what he gets for ball playing—his smile rivals that of Outfielder Cather. And there is George Davis, the young collegian who recently pitched a no-hit game. His smile is contagious. Perhaps those hirelings of Connie Mack will rub these smiles off. Perhaps.

REGISTRATION.

The registration in Connellsville and throughout the state is highly satisfactory to Republicans. It indicates with spot light distinctness the onward sweep of an overwhelming Republican plurality.

In Philadelphia out of 270,000 votes registered 1[illegible]3,000 were Republican, [illegible]000 were Democratic and 16,000 were Progressive. In addition there were 45,000 voters who declined to express a party preference. A portion of these will undoubtedly vote the Republican ticket. In any event the landslide in Philadelphia seems to be complete. The same trend is found all over the state. In the language of Editor Allen [illegible], boys, they're coming back.

In Connellsville the registration [illegible] rose to [illegible] or within 200 votes of the [illegible] ever made. It is conceded that those who took the trouble to register will take the trouble to vote and a poll of 2,000 votes is expected. The [illegible] indicates that [illegible] will [illegible] a substantial Republican plurality.

The [illegible] of affairs exists in the county. The Democrats seem to [illegible] their fight against Senator [illegible] [illegible] county [illegible] with the [illegible] campaign and they will [illegible]. The [illegible] is as false as the effect will be futile. Senator Crow was never personally stronger with the people than he is today, and the Republican county ticket was never in better shape than it is now.

The [illegible] of defeating Senator Crow is cheap politics and bluff, but when [illegible] Palmer makes the deliberate statement that he has been all over the state and he cannot find a single industry that has been adversely affected by the tariff, what can you expect from the little bosses in Fayette county?

SLANDER AND SYMPATHY.

The Sanctified Standard whose chief mission is to [illegible] Senator Crow and [illegible] false [illegible] applied to the senator [illegible] in the language and [illegible] the calendar of crime. The record is complete with the charge that the senator [illegible] for the death of the innocent [illegible] killed at the [illegible] & O. crossing [illegible] and that consequently he is a murderer.

The senator never murdered anybody [illegible] and when the election is over and the votes are counted it will be found that the editorial thugs who have been waylaying him at every turn of the road have harmed him [illegible].

The people sympathized with Morgan Hertzog on his attacker [illegible] for Judge [illegible] they thought he did not have fair play. They will sympathize with William Crow in this campaign for the same reason. They will also [illegible] the entire Republican ticket out of sympathy for themselves and their sad condition due to Democratic administration of public affairs.

WOODEN.

The Connellsville News [illegible] for cigar talks triumphantly of recent large imports for sheet bars. The News [illegible] as much at [illegible] as a certain little [illegible] newspaper did about cotton ties when its headliner referred to them as being of wooden imposition. The tin plate industry is one of the few industries in the country which has run near to normal capacity due to the fact that most of the product is used to hold the products of the soil [illegible] the various products of petroleum. The Standard Oil Company's order amounts to a big percentage of the American tin plate output and this year the American mills got the order. The sheet bar [illegible] neither better nor worse [illegible] but the Democratic tariff policy has not improved it.

PEEVISH.

[illegible] Flinn, proprietor of the Progressive party of Pennsylvania, whose chief business in life just now is to tell the public through his Bull Moose [illegible] what a double dyed scoundrel Penrose is, gets peevish when the [illegible] pauses a moment to point out a few well known chapters in Flinn's life. It's a poor politician who can't play his own game. In this campaign the men who are shouting loudest for Reform are the biggest [illegible] and hypocrites in the bunch. Chief among them are the Heavenly Twins, Palmer and McCormick, and close to them are the [illegible] county and their conscienceless [illegible].

The installation of a night ticket agent in the Baltimore & Ohio passenger station at Connellsville indicates the increased amount of passenger [illegible] handled over this route. While other railroads centering in Connellsville have curtailed their passenger service that of the B. & O. has actually [illegible] enlarged.

[illegible] Villa is back on the job again.

It is reported that certain Federal officers in Western Pennsylvania are to be [illegible] to Washington [illegible] political [illegible] Collector [illegible] Revenue and Postmaster McGinnis. Their political activities have been in line with those of President Wilson and Secretary Bryan so that they can hardly be said to have been pernicious. It is true there is something in the Civil Service law about this matter, but in this campaign the Commander in Chief has suspended the Civil law.

Wage reductions are announced in a number of large industrial lines. Before the election the Democrats pledged themselves to an economical administration. This is the only evidence of economy forthcoming and it will be observed that it is at the expense of labor.

Palmer and McCormick, the Heavenly Twins of the Pennsylvania campaign, are not a Moral Issue, but they aspire to be a Moral Trust with a monopoly of all the political virtue in Pennsylvania. All the [illegible] they have was long ago hypothecated.

The automobiles have been taking their toll of death recently with and without the assistance of the railroads.

The pupils of the Connellsville high school will enter into competition for the [illegible] offered for the best essay on Pocahontas, the Indian princess. Just wait until they are invited to compete [illegible] Colonel William Crawford, the Indian fighter, Revolutionary hero and Pioneer martyr.

At last accounts [illegible] at [illegible] Morgan Hertzog was sitting tightly on his [illegible] and Chairman Sterling was counting imaginary piles of money.

[illegible] Democratic [illegible] [illegible] are [illegible] their [illegible] doesn't sound [illegible] that [illegible] in vain for the sound of industrial resumption [illegible] the toot of returning prosperity.

Senator Crow doesn't [illegible] to run [illegible] multiplicity of tickets to get votes outside of his own party.

The [illegible] plan [illegible] by the [illegible] county [illegible] in the [illegible] Herald Square is something of [illegible] [illegible] it is worse than its [illegible].

The Connellsville people have not [illegible] the registration [illegible] but they have made excellent progress.

[illegible] fever [illegible] on the increase in spite of the efforts of the health authorities to eliminate the cause.

Responsibility for the [illegible] [illegible] will not be settled by the railroad or the Uniontown Standard. A verdict will be rendered in accordance with the facts.

THE PEACOCK

By GEORGE FITCH

Author of "At Good Old Siwash"

When the Creator finished up Adam [illegible] discovered [illegible] that [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] He [illegible] [illegible] to supply the deficiency.

The peacock consists of [illegible] feathers [illegible] motive power consists of a body and a small head with a [illegible]. The mission of the peacock is to [illegible] around the land [illegible] it whenever there is [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] for the [illegible] time kings had to [illegible] to live up to their position but it was a great [illegible] other [illegible] of fine [illegible] the peacock is tough and stringy and eminently [illegible] in flavor.

The peacock's tail is the [illegible] thing in nature. [illegible] It consists of [illegible] radiantly tinted feathers and each feather has a beautiful eye [illegible] feather [illegible] These eyes [illegible] until [illegible] thing which [illegible] equal to [illegible] Chinese [illegible].

The fact that the peacock [illegible] Fifth avenue period while his wife the peahen [illegible] is remarkable. However man has not always been the somber individual that he is [illegible] Three hundred years ago [illegible] king's courtier was so [illegible] dressed that he made a peacock [illegible] if he was in mourning. In those days when a man who had any society aspiration spent hours each day in arraying himself in gold lace, powdered curls, lace cuffs and pink silk panties, the peacock was greatly respected for his modesty. In fact he was generally [illegible] for [illegible] [illegible] a gentleman was more [illegible] fat and didn't fight so much.

MERCY HOW YOU FRIGHTENED ME

Nowadays the peacock [illegible] [illegible] English estates and [illegible] [illegible] is [illegible] because of his [illegible] which [illegible] between [illegible] [illegible] saw hitting [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] which would [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].

FIRST USE OF RESINOL STOPS TERRIBLE ITCH

Jan 27, 1911. "I suffered over eight years with eczema. It started in one little place and kept spreading until it covered my hands. My hands looked like they had been burned by fire and peeled off in large pieces until they were only raw flesh. I was told it was eczema. It itched and burned me so that I could not sleep at night. I tried all sorts of eczema salves and one prescription after another but nothing gave me any relief until I tried Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment and after the first application my hands never itched or burned again, and were well in one week. I want every sufferer from eczema to know that they can find a cure in Resinol." (Signed) Miss Ethel Scott, Milstead, Ga.

Physicians have prescribed Resinol for nineteen years, for all sorts of skin troubles, pimples, dandruff, sores, ulcers, burns, etc. Every druggist sells Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth" now and then—a bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver and are constipated, you'll find quick, sure and only pleasant results from one or two little Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take one or two every night just to keep right. Try them. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

THE "ACHIEVEMENTS" OF THE DEMOCRATS

Here Are Four Measures of Present Administration.

The Democrats propose to issue a campaign handbook citing alleged achievements of the party. In the estimation of the people there are four achievements to be credited—or perhaps charged is the better word—to the party in power. The first "achievement" is the Underwood tariff law. This law has closed thousands of factories, reduced hours in others, set at idleness more than a million men and brought stagnation to the business world. It doesn't pretend to be a protective measure. More than that, President Wilson in his message of Sept 4 virtually confesses to congress that the Underwood law has failed in its primary purpose of raising revenue for the government at a time when the country was at absolute peace.

The second "achievement" is the banking and currency law. It has been on the statute books since December 1913, but it is not yet in operation. There are three possible reasons for this. There is either something wrong with the law or there is something wrong with those who are to administer it, or the administration does not care to put it into operation long before election for fear it will be demonstrated as big a failure as the Underwood tariff law.

The third "achievement" is the repeal by the Democrats of the Panama free tolls, thus repudiating the platform of their own party, the president's own public pledge and the expressed will of an overwhelming majority of the American people.

The fourth "achievement" is the proposed appropriation by this congress of $100,000,000 more than was appropriated by the last Republican congress, and yet that congress was bitterly condemned in the Baltimore platform for its extravagance.

Does the president or any one of his party leaders think for a minute the American people will not distinguish between real achievements and simply running amuck?

DEMOCRATIC VISION SHORT.

Failure of Underwood Tariff Was to Be Expected.

The same shortsighted vision of husbandry and economy that has made the Democratic south risk its financial prospects year after year practically in the cotton crop alone so that it is now facing tremendous possibilities of loss because of the European war is the same political economy that framed the Underwood tariff. And the failure of the Underwood tariff to provide revenue against emergencies now brings a whole nation face to face with the always obnoxious and to be dreaded war tax. The tariff, according to a famous Democratic authority, may be "a local issue" in the making, but it is a national issue after it is made and fails. It is merely the same old inevitable logic of results of the same old Democratic business incompetency.

AID FROM WALL STREET.

Democratic Currency Bill Drawn by Financial Editor.

The Democratic currency bill was drawn in Wall street. The Democratic congress paid the editor of the Wall Street Journal $4,814.50 for doing it. The name of the editor of the Wall Street Journal is H. Parker Willis. This is the Glass-Owen bill which the Democrats passed as a panacea for the country's financial evils.

"Discussing this very Glass currency bill," said Representative Mondell of Wyoming on the floor of the house of representatives the other day, "I said some one had been impolite and unkind enough to inquire who wrote it, and I said it occurred to me that's not so important an interrogatory as this: Who furnished the receptive ear to influences, with personal aims and purposes to serve, and, upon the suggestions thus filtering in from Wall street and other interested points, finally agreed upon the form of legislation?"

Mr. Mondell added that if the editor of the Wall Street Journal actually wrote the currency bill—and he thought the fact that he was paid for doing so would seem to be conclusive evidence he did write it—he ought to have been paid for it. Congressman Sloan of Nebraska inquired, since congress had been relieved of drawing the bill, whether any one had volunteered to relieve congress from the burden of paying him. No Democratic member made answer.

Administration Sectional.

The national administration is sectional. Its tariff has been framed in utter disregard of protection to wage earners, resulting in a decrease of exports to the sum of $80,000,000 and of an increase of imports of $101,000,000. The former represents the direct loss to American workers and the latter the gain of foreigners in the home market at the expense of American industry. The currency law is being administered in aid of private and sectional interests and to the injury of the state of New York.—Troy (N. Y.) Northern Budget.

It May Be Overworked.

Does the president know that the people of this country are still watchfully waiting for that reduction in the cost of living which was promised them? Or is it intended to make that promise do service in the next campaign?—Philadelphia Press.

Good nature and common sense are required from all.

LOYALTY NOT ESSENTIAL FOR CONFEDERATE CLAIMS.

Underwood Establishes Precedent That May Be Costly.

Thousands of war claims mounting up in the millions may make a heavy drain upon the treasury if the amendment of which Oscar Underwood, Democratic house leader, is the author, is forced through. Mr. Underwood's amendment is the first instance in fifty years where the barrier of loyalty to the government, which has always been the basis of all war claims, is absolutely shattered.

So far as the Democratic leader's amendment is concerned the flood gates are thrown open for the filing of hundreds of thousands of Confederate war claims. If his policy is approved it may mean the payment of millions of dollars to the south. And it looks as though it might be, since Democrats south and north followed Mr. Underwood in his break over the loyalty bars like sheep.

Republican Leader Mann fought valiantly against the establishment of this unusual precedent in the house, but he was swept away by the Democratic torrent.

The particular claim was that of Antonio J. Lovell and heirs-at-law of Confederate General Quitman for federal occupation of lands owned by that general in the crop year of 1865. The United States court of claims rejected the claim because the owners of the land failed to establish their loyalty to the government. The standing committee on war claims likewise rejected it, but the Democratic leader put it through.

Concern has been expressed by those who see the possible drain on the treasury that this precedent may create lest immediately after the coming elections thousands of other such claims may be considered and allowed, regardless of the loyalty or disloyalty of claimants during the war. Minority Leader Mann called attention to this danger, but he was ignored by the Democratic majority.

Early Earrings.

The earring is not a modern invention, for more than twenty centuries ago the daughter of Aristotle wore golden hoops. The philosopher's daughter's earrings were found in her tomb near Chalcis, in Euboea, by exploring archaeologists, and certainly modern workmanship cannot produce their equal. In each golden hoop swung a tiny dove, with precious stones for eyes and bands of minute gems to give the color of the iridescent breast and wings. The feathers were of granulated gold, and the tail feathers were so marvelously wrought and adjusted that they acted like a balance, as in a living bird, so that the exquisite miniature creatures whenever the wearer moved or laughed or tossed her head would move and balance themselves upon their pendent perches.

Message of the Telephone.

There is nothing in the sound of the shrill little telephone bell to warn us of the import of its message. More's the pity. It may be that bore whose telephone conversation begins: "Well, what do you know today?" It may be your lawyer to say you've inherited a million. Hence the arrogance of the instrument. It knows its voice will never willfully go unanswered so long as the element of chance lies concealed within it.—American Magazine.

Corn In Kansas.

The earliest mention of corn in Kansas is found in the account of Coronado's expedition in 1541-2. Professor Williston found charred corn in the ruins of prehistoric Indian pueblos in Scott county, estimated by him to be at least two and a half centuries old.

KILL! KILL! KILL! EPITOMIZES WAR

First Hand Accounts Show Awfulness of Battle.

DAYS THAT DEFY IMAGINATION

Sights In Nations' Terrible Conflict Which Make the Blood Run Cold. "I Should Never Have Thought Men Could Stand It," Says One Soldier In Letter From the Front.

The horrors of war are brought home strikingly to the reader of the newspapers in these days of stress abroad by means of many a personal narrative as thrilling as any ever told by a master of fiction. These little stories recite deeds of dauntless courage and impress one with the correctness of General Sherman's famous definition of war.

"The statements of the wounded at Paris returning from the Aisne show the terrible nature of the fighting. All practically tell the same story," said one man.

"It began with heavy and accurate shell fire. There was a lunch interval. It stopped about 5:30 every day, and then in the night often came the charges. One night I couldn't count them. It was awful! Kill! Kill! Kill! And still they came on, shoving each other over on to us.

"There was no man but had his story of comrades shot on either side of him, of how they were smashed day after day, of the shriek of shells, of the perpetual groaning of the wounded as they lay in the wet trenches—seven days and nights of it and sometimes only an hour's sleep.'

"Muddled to the eyes, wet, often blood caked, many were suffering from the curious aphasia produced by the continuous and terrible concussion of shells bursting. Some were dazed and speechless, some deafened, and yet, splendid to relate, I saw on no face the terrible animal war look."

"It Was Horrible; It Was Ghastly."

"I have just been living through days that defy imagination. I should never have thought men could stand it. Not a second has passed but my life has been in danger.

"It was horrible. It was ghastly. But I have been saved for you and for our happiness, and I take heart again, although I am still terribly unnerved. God grant that I may see you again soon and that this horror may soon be over.

"None of us can do any more. Human strength is at an end."

The correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph at Rheims sends this interesting paragraph:

"In the doorway still stands the crippled beggar who has sought alms there for many years. He maintained his post throughout the bombardment, and, like a statue, he stands, covered with dust, pebbles and glass. The man was unharmed. He was crippled in the war of 1870."

Spellbound at Hero's Act.

The heroic self sacrifice of a soldier named Tresignies of the Second regiment, chasseurs a pied, has just been related. The Belgians were exceedingly anxious to get across the Willebroeck canal at Pont Brule, but a bridge was raised against them on the other side and occupied by a strong force of Germans. Tresignies volunteered to swim across and try to lower the bridge. It meant certain death. Before he plunged in he wrote with a pencil on a scrap of paper the name and address of his wife and the simple words, "God will help and comfort you." The Germans were startled into admiration as he leaped into the stream and for a few moments held their fire; but, seeing what he was about to accomplish, they riddled him with bullets just as he lowered the bridge.

As it fell into place with a crash the Belgians rushed across with shouts of triumph. Tresignies' body was buried with military honors.

A big London department store announced recently that any unmarried male employee between twenty and thirty-five who did not enlist would be dismissed after Sept. 12.

Some of the elevator attendants now are girls. They wear blue uniforms of a material not unlike that of overalls and seem to operate the cars quite as efficiently as the men.

NEW WAR COST ESTIMATE.

Six Nations' Daily Expense $38,000,000, Says German Expert.

Fourteen thousand million dollars is the yearly cost of the war (or $38,356,154 per day) to Germany, Austria, Belgium, France, Russia and England, according to the German statistical expert, Captain Max Henke.

Of this expense France and Germany, he estimates, each with 3,000,000 men in the field, must stand $2,800,000,000 each, while Russia's share, with her 4,000,000 fighting men, will be $3,800,000,000.

These figures would seem exaggerated if the actual cost of England's Boer war (in which not more than 400,000 British troops were actual' engaged at one time) was not known have cost $1,200,000,000 in less tha. three years, or $150,000,000 a year.

French Dueling Methods.

Many of the duels in France end without bloodshed. When the offense is not very serious it is agreed beforehand that the words of command shall be given so rapidly that the duelists will not have time to take good aim. Sometimes three shots are exchanged without a hit, and then the seconds step in and "honor is satisfied." At the word "Fire!" the pistol is raised instantly, and it must be discharged not later than the word "Three!" so the speed with which these words are given regulates the time in which it is possible to take aim. Therefore the speed with which they are spoken is agreed on beforehand, this depending upon the seriousness of the duel. The words are timed with a metronome. If the encounter be very serious this is set at the lowest speed, eighty beats a minute, which gives time for taking accurate aim. A speed of 140 beats a minute allows no time for aiming, and, therefore, is used when seconds think the duel should be made as little dangerous as possible.—Philadelphia Record.

Sensation of Drowning.

"I and a party of friends had rowed far out into the bay. We all plunged into the sea and swam about. I went farther than my friends, and I imagine I got tired. I went deep down and came up again, and I remember the look of the sky. Then I went down again, and I distinctly heard a sound of most lovely singing. I imagine this was from my ears. I had not the very slightest feeling of suffocation or fear. Only I thought that my husband, who was not with us, would be so grieved. The music became louder and more beautiful, and I saw a dazzling light. The next thing I felt was agony. My friends had missed me, and as I came up for the last time they saw my head. I was hauled into the boat, and then came indescribable agony as I was brought back to life. The lungs filling again was torture."

You're Being Talked About.

We do not wish to alarm you unduly, but do you know that you are being criticised? It may be that you do not care, either because you are so abandoned and so bent upon an evil course as to be lost to all sense of shame or because you are so immaculately virtuous as to leave not a single vulnerable point of attack for the slanderous tongue. The fact remains that uncomplimentary things are being said about you, things that do not at all agree with your estimate of yourself. Not one of your friends but objects to something about you. Maybe you do care. If so we are sorry for you, because you cannot stop it. It would be a good thing for you to mend your ways, but don't expect to stop the talk in that way. Figure your life out the very best way you can and then expect your neighbors and friends to disapprove in all possible combinations and permutations.—Life.

The Hint That Failed

Military Forces of Servia.

Servia's plan of military organization is distinctive. Compulsory service is personal for all ablebodied men and pecuniary for all who are incapable of personal service. These latter must pay an indirect tax of 30 per cent additional. The military forces are divided into a national army and the landsturm, which forms the last line of defense. Service in the national army begins at twenty-one and ends after forty-five. In the landsturm it begins at seventeen, ends at twenty-one; begins again at forty-six and ends at fifty.

The national army consists of three bans, the first ban including all ablebodied men between twenty-one and thirty-one, the second ban all between thirty-one and thirty-eight and the third those between thirty-eight and forty-five.

The first ban has its cadre, a school through which every ablebodied man of twenty-one must pass. No one is allowed to change his nationality while belonging to the first ban, nor can any member thereof receive any outside appointment or become even a monk until he has served his term in the army.—Baltimore Sun.

Titles of the Czar.

Of all monarchs of Europe the most imposing in his list of titles is Nicholas of Russia, who bears the following honors: Emperor and autocrat of all the Russias, czar of Moscow, Kiev, Vladimir, Novgorod, Kazan, Astrakhan, Poland, Siberia, the Tauric Chersonese and Georgia; lord of Pskow, grand duke of Smolensk, Lithuania, Volhynia, Podolia and Finland; prince of Esthonia, Livonia, Kurland, Semgalle, Samogitia, Bielostok, Carelia, Tver, Perm, Yougoria, Viatka, Bulgaria, etc.; lord and grand duke of Lower Novgorod, Tcheringoff, Riasan, Polotsk, Rostoff, Yaroslav, Beloscro, Oudoria, Obodria, Condia, Vitebsk, Mstislaw and all the regions of the north; lord and sovereign of Iveria, Cartalinia, Kabardinia and the Armenian provinces; sovereign of the Circassian and mountain princes; lord of Turkestan, heir of Norway and duke of Schleswig-Holstein, Stormarn, Dithmars and Oldenburg.

Old Time Beggars.

In the eighteenth century begging was a frightful nuisance in the German states. In Bavaria whole regiments had to be sent out to arrest and punish the numerous professional beggars, and Cologne, with a population at the time of only 40,000, had nearly 10,000 paupers.

Early Rising.

Some one asked Archbishop Whately if he believed personally in early rising. That witty divine replied that he had on one occasion risen early, but that he felt so proud all the morning and so sleepy all the afternoon that he had resolved in the evening never to do it again.

Why, Indeed?

Why should a man go to a phrenologist to find out pleasant things about himself when he can't believe any disagreeable things he already knows?—Philadelphia Inquirer.

A surly citizen, this agent, ill-pleased to have his plans disordered by chance-flung strangers. He greeted Alan's breathless query with a grunt of ingrained churlishness.

"Nah," he averred, "they ain't no more trains till mornin'. Can't y' see I'm shuttin' up?"

"But surely there must be a telegraph station—"

"You bet your life they is—right here in this depot. An' I'm shuttin' it up, too."

"Has the operator gone for the night?"

"He's going. I'm the op'rator. No business transacted after office hours. Call raound at eight o'clock tomorrow mornin'. Now if you'll jest step out of that door, I'll say g'd-night to you."

"But I must send a telegram," Alan protested. "I tell you, I must. It's a matter of life and death."

"Sure, young feller. It always is—after business hours."

"Won't you open up again—"

"I tell you, no!"

In desperation Alan rammed a hand into his trousers pocket. "Will a dollar influence your better judgment?" he suggested shrewdly.

"Let's see your dollar," the other returned with no less craft—open incredulity informing his countenance.

And, surely enough, Alan brought forth an empty hand.

"Make a light," he said sharply. "My money's in a belt round my waist. Open your office. You'll get your dollar, all right."

"All right," he grumbled, reopening the door of the telegraph booth and making a second light inside. "There's blanks and a pencil. Write your message. It ain't often I do this—but I'll make an exception for you."

Alan delayed long enough only to make a few inquiries, drawing out the information that, for one who had not patience to wait the morning train northbound, the quickest way to any city of importance was by boat across Buzzard's bay to New Bedford.

Boats, it was implied, were plentiful, readily to be chartered.

A time-table supplied all other needful advice. Alan wrote his message swiftly.

Addressed to Digby, his man of business in New York, it required that gentleman to arrange for a motor-car to be held in waiting on the waterfront of New Bedford from 3:00 a. m. until called for in the name of Mr. Law, as well as for a special train at Providence, on similar provisions.

But now, though he was all unconscious of the fact, he went no more alone.

His shadow in the moonlight kept him company upon the sands, and above, on the edge of the bluffs, another shadow moved on parallel course and at a pace sedulously patterned after his.

He found his sweetheart and his friend much as he had left them, with this difference—that Mr. Barcus now lay flat on his back and snoring lustily.

He was wakened quickly enough, however, by Alan's news.

But when it was the turn of Rose—they faltered. She lay so still, betrayed her exhaustion so patently in every line of her unconscious posture, as well as in the sharp pallor of her face upturned to the moon, that it seemed scarcely less than downright inhumanity to disturb her.

None the less, it had to be done. Alan hardened his heart with the reminder of their urgent necessity, and eventually brought her to with the aid of a few drops of brandy.

Between them, they helped her up the beach, past the point, and at length to the door of the hotel, where—reanimated by the mere promise of food—Rose disengaged their arms and entered without more assistance; while Barcus was deterred from treading her heels in his own famished eagerness, by the hand of Alan falling heavily upon his arm.

"Wait!" the latter admonished in a half-whisper. "Look there!"

Barcus followed the direction of his gesture—and was transfixed by the sight of a rocket spearing into the night-draped sky from a point invisible beyond the headland of the lighthouse.

The two consulted one another with startled and fearful eyes.

As with one voice they murmured one word: "Judith!" To this Alan added gravely: "Or some spy of hers."

Then rousing, Alan released his friend, with a smart shove urging him across the threshold of the hotel.

"Go on," he insisted, "join Rose and get your supper. I'll be with you as soon as I can arrange for a boat. Tell her nothing more than that—that I thought it unwise to wait until everybody was abed before looking round."

He turned to find his landlord approaching from the direction of the hotel barroom. And for the time it seemed that the wind of their luck must have veered to a favoring quarter; for the question was barely uttered before the landlord lifted a willing voice and hailed a fellow townsman idling nearby.

"Hey, Jake—come here!"

Introduced as Mr. Breed, Jake pleaded guilty to ownership of the fastest and stanchest power-cruiser in the adjacent waters, which he was avariciously keen to charter.

They observed haste religiously; within ten minutes they stood upon a float at the foot of a flight of wooden steps down the side of the town wharf, while the promised rowboat of Mr. Breed drew in, at most leisurely pace, to meet them.

Aboard and away from the wharf, the burden of Alan's solicitude seemed to grow lighter with every squeal of the greaseless oarlocks, with every dip and splash of the blades which, wielded by a crew of villainous countenance, brought them nearer the handsome motorboat which Mr. Breed designated as his own. It was not until Alan looked up suddenly to find Mr. Breed covering him with a revolver of most vicious character that he had the least apprehension of any danger nearer than the offing, where Judith's schooner might be lurking, waiting for its prey to come out and be devoured.

"I'll take that money-belt of yours, young feller," Mr. Breed announced, "and be quick about it—not forgetting what's in your trousers pocket!"

In the passion of his indignation Alan neglected entirely to play the game by the rules. The indifference he displayed toward the weapon was positively unprofessional — for he knocked it aside as if it had been nothing more dangerous than a straw. And in the same flutter of an eyelash he launched himself like a wildcat at the throat of Mr. Breed.

Two Men Shadowed Him.

Before that one knew what was happening he had gone over the stern and had involuntarily disarmed himself as well.

The other two men made a sad business of attempting to overpower Mr. Barcus. In less than a minute they were both overboard.

"And just for this," Alan said before getting out of earshot—"I'm going to treat my party to a joy-ride in your pretty powerboat."

He concluded this speech abruptly as Barcus brought them up under the quarter of the power cruiser.

Within two minutes the motor was spinning contentedly, the mooring had been slipped, and the motorboat was heading out of the harbor.

Within five minutes she had left it, well astern and was shooting rapidly westward, making nothing of the buffets of a very tolerable sea kicked up by the freshening southwesterly wind.

"My friend," observed Alan, "as our acquaintance ripens I am more and more impressed that neither of us was born to die a natural death, whether abed or at the hands of those who dislike us; but rather to be hanged as common pirates."

"You have the courage of ignorance," Barcus replied coolly; "if you'll take the trouble to glance astern I promise you a sight that will move you to suspend judgment for the time being."

At this Alan sat up with a start.

Back against the loom of the Elizabeth Islands through which they had navigated while he nodded, shone the milk-white sails of an able schooner.

Sheets all taut and every inch of canvas fat with the beam wind, she footed it merrily in their wake—a silver jet spouting from her cutwater.

CHAPTER XX.

Hell-Fire.

But by this stage in his history Mr. Law had arrived at a state of mind immune to surprise at the discovery that he had once more failed to elude the vigilance and pertinacity of the woman who sought his life.

He viewed the schooner with no more display of emotion than resided in narrowing eyelids and a tightening of the muscles about his mouth.

"Much farther to go?" he inquired presently, in a colorless voice.

"At our present pace—say, two hours."

"And will that enable us to hold our own?"

"Just about," Barcus allowed, squinting critically at the chase; "she's some footer, that schooner; and this is just the wind she likes best."

"How much lead have we got?"

"A mile or so—none too much."

"Anything to be done to mend matters?"

"Nothing—but pray, if you remember how."

In the end they made it by a narrow margin. The face of Judith Trine was distinctly revealed by the chill gray light of early dawn to those aboard the power cruiser as she swept up through the reaches of New Bedford harbor and aimed for the first wharf that promised a fair landing on the main waterfront of the city.

There was neither a policeman nor a watchman of any sort in sight.

Nor was there, for all his hopes and prayers, based on the telegram to Digby, a sign of a motor car.

Still, not much of the street was revealed. The docks on either hand were walled and roofed, cutting off the view.

If they ran for it, they must surely be overhauled. Something must be done to hinder the crew of the schooner from landing.

"Here!" he cried sharply to Barcus. "You take Rose and hurry to the street and find that motor-car. I know she's there. Digby never failed me yet!"

"But you—"

"Don't waste time worrying about me. I'll be with you in three shakes. I'm only going to put a spoke in Judith's wheel. I've got a scheme!"

As for his scheme—he had none other than to give them battle, to sacrifice himself if need be, to make sure the escape of Rose.

Sheer luck smiled on him to this extent, that in turning his eye lighted on a four-foot length of stout, three-inch scantling, an excellently formidable club.

But soon, disarmed, his case was desperate—and there were two already safe upon the dock and others madly scrambling up to reinforce them.

Wildly he cast about for some substitute weapon, he leaped toward a small pyramid of little but heavy kegs, and seizing one, swung it overhead and cast it full force into the midriff of his nearest enemy; so that this one doubled up convulsively, with a sickish grunt, and vanished in turn over the end of the wharf.

His fellow followed with less injury. But Alan had no time to wonder whether the man had tripped and thrown himself in his effort to escape a second hurtling keg, or had turned coward and fled. It was enough that he had returned, precipitately and heavily, to the schooner.

The keg, meeting with no resistance, pursued him even to the deck, where the force of its impact split its seams.

None of the combatants, however, Alan least of all, noticed that the powder that filtered out was black and coarse. Alan, indeed, had only the haziest notion that they were powder-kegs he used as ammunition. That they were heavy and hurt when they collided with human flesh and bone was all that interested him.

In the same breath he heard a friendly voice shout warning far up the dock, and knew that Barcus was coming to his aid.

A glance over-shoulder, too, discovered the cause of the warning; two men who had thus far escaped his attentions were maneuvering to fall upon him from behind. The bound required to evade them brought him face to face with Judith as she landed on the deck.

"Oh," she cried, "I hate you, I hate you—"

"So you've said, my dear, but—"

His final words were not audible even to himself. In his confidence (now that Barcus was taking care of the others) and his impatience with the woman, and in his perhaps unworthy wish to demonstrate conclusively how cheap he held her, Alan had tossed the pistol over the end of the wharf.

It was an old-fashioned weapon, and the force with which it struck the deck released the hammer.

Instantly the .44 cartridge blazed into the open head of a broken powder keg.

And with a roar like the trump of doom and a mighty gust of flame and smoke the decks of the schooner were riven and shattered; her masts tottered and fell . . .

CHAPTER XXI.

Anticlimax.

Alan came to himself supported by Barcus—his senses still reeling from the concussion of that thunderbolt which he had so unwittingly loosed—the cloud of sulphurous smoke and yet dissipated by the wind.

Judith lay at his feet, stunned; and round about other figures of men insensible, if not, for all he could say, dead.

And then Barcus was hustling him unceremoniously down the wharf.

"Come! Come!" he rallied Alan. "Pull yourself together and keep a stiff upper lip. Rose is waiting in the car, and if you don't want to be arrested you'll stir your stumps, my son! That explosion is going to bring the worthy burghers of New Bedford buzzing round our ears like a swarm of hornets!"

His prediction was justified even before it was made; already the nearby dwellings were vomiting half-clothed humanity; already a score of people were galloping down toward the head of the wharf; and in their number a policeman appeared as if by magic.

And while the man hesitated Alan grabbed him by the shoulder, threw him bodily from the car, dropped into his seat, cried a warning to Rose, and threw in the clutch. The machine responded without a jar, they were a hundred feet distant from the scene of the accident before Alan was fairly settled in his place.

As he grew more and more calm, he congratulated himself on having drawn an excellent car in the lottery of chance. It was light, but the motor ran famously, and if not capable of a racing pace it would serve his ends as speedily as was consistent with reasonable care for the life of the woman he loved.

Yet his congratulations were premature; they were not ten minutes out of the environs of the city when Rose left her seat and knelt behind his, to communicate the intelligence that they were already being pursued.

A heavy touring car, she said it was, driven by a man, a woman in the seat by his side—Judith the latter, the man an old employe of her father's by the name of Marrophat.

Marrophat!

Alan remembered that one.

He could only trust in his skill as a driver, and skill is the lesser factor in such a race.

They could overtake the fugitives practically when they would.

But for some weird, incomprehensible reason they chose to hang a certain distance in the rear, a distance that could readily be bridged by two minutes of furious driving.

Why?

In the succeeding quarter hour the calmness of fatalism became Alan's. They were biding their time for some secret and fatal purpose. The blow was predestined to fall, but cruelly deferred.

For his own part, he drove like an exceptionally cunning madman. . . .

And then, quite clearly, he recognized the time and the place and the character of the road that lay before him as the car sped like a dragon-fly down a slight grade.

From the bottom of the grade it swung away in a wide, graceful curve, bordered for some distance by railroad tracks on a slightly lower level.

He had guessed the fiendish plan of the other driver only too truly.

As they approached at express speed the stretch where the road paralleled the tracks Alan sought to hug the left-hand side of the road, but in vain.

He heard the far hoot-toot of a freight locomotive . . .

There followed a maniac moment, when the world was upside down. Alan's car slipped and skidded, swung sideways with frightful momentum toward the railroad tracks, caught its wheels against the ties, and . . .

The sun swung in the heavens like a ball on a string. There was a crash, a roar . . . There was nothing—oblivion . . .

The car had turned turtle, pinning Rose and Alan beneath it.

"Alan!" she gasped. "You are not killed?"

"No—not even much hurt, I fancy," he replied. "And you?"

"Not much—"

The deep-throated roar of the locomotive bellowing danger silenced him. He closed his eyes.

Then abruptly the weight was lifted from his chest. He saw a man dragging Rose from under the machine, and saw that the man was Marrophat. And almost immediately someone lifted his head and shoulders, caught him with two hands beneath his arm pits and drew him clear of the machine.

And the face of his rescuer was the face of Judith Trine.

The crash he had expected, of the car being crumpled up by the oncoming locomotive, did not follow.

As he scrambled to his feet, his first glance was up the track, and discovered the train slowing to a halt.

His next was one of wonder for the countenance of Judith Trine as she stood, at a little distance, regarding him; her look almost illegible, a curious compound of passions coloring it—relief, regret, hatred, love . . .

His third glance descried beyond her the figures of Marrophat carrying Rose in his arms, stumbling as he ran toward his car on the highroad.

He moved precipitately to pursue, but found his way barred by Judith.

"No!" she cried violently. "No, you shall not—!"

Her hand sought the grip of a revolver that protruded from her pocket.

With a short, hysterical gasp, he began to laugh.

"What!" he taunted her—"again?"

"Think what you like!" she cried in a frenzy. "You saved me once—now I spare you. We're quits. But next time—"

"O—rot!" he interjected. "You will never have the courage to pull that trigger when I'm helpless in your hands!"

The Face of Judith Was Distinctly Revealed.

The hot blood mantled her exquisite face like red fire. She caught her breath with a sob, then flung wildly at him.

"Well, if you must know—it's true. I can't bring myself to kill you. I would to God I could. But I can't. For all that, you shall die—I could not save you if I would! And this I promise you—you shall never see Rose again before you die!"

And while he stood gaping, she swung from him and ran, quickly covering the little distance between him and the car.

As she jumped into this and dropped down upon the seat beside her half-conscious sister, Marrophat swung the car away.

It vanished in a dust-cloud as a throng of railroad employes surrounded and assailed him with clamorous questions.

CHAPTER XXII.

The House Divided.

Alone in that strange place of silence and shadows—that den of the devil's livery, crimson and black—chained to the invalid chair wherein, day in, day out, for years on end, he had suffered the Promethean torments of the life that would not die out of his wretched, wrecked carcass, though without ceasing sharp-beaked envy, hatred, malice and all uncharitableness pecked insatiably at his vitals: Seneca Trine sat waiting, with the impassivity of a graven figure waiting on the imminent hour of ultimate avengement for the wrong that had made him what he was.

"Another hour! . . . In sixty minutes more they will be here, Judith and Marrophat and Rose—poor fool! —and him! . . . In sixty minutes more they will put him down before me, bound and helpless, if not dead . . ."

A slight pause prefaced words that were a whimpered prayer: "God send that he be not dead! Have I lingered here in anguish all these weary years for the fulfillment of my revenge only to be cheated at the end by Death? God grant that Alan Law may be laid down still living here at my feet! . . . Then . . ."

Rose Turned on Her Passionately.

A bitter smile twisted his tortured features: "Then shall my will be done to him! And then, when I have seen him die as his father died—then—Ah, God!—then at last I too may die! . . ."

There was a long silence, then a groan of exasperated protest: "Why do they not come? Why does Judith delay, when she knows how I suffer? Why have I been put off from day to day with her telegrams that begged for more time and promised everything—but told nothing!—until yesterday. . . . Where are those messages she sent me yesterday?"

His one sound hand groped out like a claw and sought a mass of papers on the desk beside him, sorting out from among them two yellow forms. Painfully he blinked over these and slowly his pain-bent lips conned their wording;

"'Alan and Rose safe with me—will bring both home tomorrow night without fail,'" he read the first aloud; and then the second: "'Have motorcar waiting for me tomorrow morning from three o'clock till called for New Bedford waterfront—Judith.'"

"No!" he affirmed with the fervor of one persuaded by his own desires: "I must not doubt the girl! She has promised, she has performed:

So still was he, indeed that he seemed to sleep, but so deceptive was that semblance that he was alert for the least sound. The girl entered softly, as if fearful of disturbing his slumbers; but she found him with head erect and eyes a-blaze.

"Judith!" he cried, his great voice vibrating like a brazen bell. "At last! Where is he? You have brought him? Where is he?"

With no more answer than a sigh, the girl drooped her head and let her hands hang limply with palms exposed.

After an instant of incredulous disappointment the man shot a single, frigid question at her:

"You have failed?"

"I have failed," she confessed.

"Why?"

She shrugged slightly. "Who knows why one fails? I did my best: he was too much for me, outwitted me at every turn. Time and again I thought I had him, but always he escaped, either by his own wit and courage or with another's aid. Only yesterday night they were all three in the hollow of my hands—but now I bring you only Rose."

She faltered, awed by the glare of his infuriated eyes. "Let me explain," she begged.

He snapped her short: "You cannot explain. The thing is impossible, that you should have failed. There is something beneath this, something you will not tell me."

She endeavored to speak, but he enforced silence with a sonorous "No!"

His hand sought the row of buttons on the desk and pressed one long.

Almost instantly a servant glided noiselessly into the room.

"My daughter Rose—have her brought here to me at once!"

In another moment the replica of his daughter Judith was ushered into his presence.

Upon this one he loosed the lightnings of his wrath without ruth.

In a lull in Trine's tirade, Judith chose to interject: "Don't be so hard on the silly fool: she's not responsible; she's sick with love for that good-looking simpleton!"

"And you!" Rose turned on her passionately—"what about you? If I love Alan Law, at least I love him openly. I am not ashamed to own it—and I don't pursue him, as you do, pretending I mean to sacrifice him to a wicked family feud, and then spare him every time I meet him, to lead him to believe I haven't the heart to injure him—as you do, hoping so to work upon his sympathies and earn a kindly word and a pat on the head from his hand!"

Fiercely she leveled a denunciatory arm at her sister. "There!" she cried to her father—"if you need to know—there stands the daughter who has betrayed your faith—as I have not, who have never even pretended to approve your villainy!"

"I think," Trine announced in a voice of ice—"I have learned now what I needed to know."

His fingers sought the row of buttons; and when a servant responded, he inquired:

"Mr. Marrophat has returned?"

"He is in the waiting room, sir."

"Conduct Miss Judith to him and tell him I hold him personally responsible for her safe-keeping. He will understand."

And for a long time thereafter the father, alone with the daughter who had been estranged from him since birth by every instinct of her nature, essayed in vain to break down her mutinous silence.

At last Trine summoned two of his creatures and had her led weeping from the rooms to be held prisoner in her bedchamber on the topmost floor of the house.

CHAPTER XXIII.

A Sporting Offer.

Some two hours later, that same evening, Mr. Alan Law, very much alive and, in spite of a complete new outfit of ready-made clothing, looking much more like himself than he had in a fortnight, issued forth from the Grand Central station, hailed a taxicab and had himself conveyed to the Hotel Monolith.

But if he looked his proper self once more, it speedily was demonstrated that his wish was otherwise, for after learning from the room-clerk of the Monolith that a suite was being held in the name of Arthur Lawrence, that was the name Mr. Law inscribed on the register.

On the other hand, it was his true name that he gave to the person whom he called upon the telephone immediately after being shown to his rooms. But then he was speaking to his old friend and man of business, Mr. Digby.

Within another ten minutes this last was in conference with his employer:

"I think you must be out of your head," he insisted nervously, once their first greetings were over. "You might just as sensibly throw yourself from the top of the Metropolitan tower as come to New York while Trine lives and knows you're this side the water."

"Nonsense!" Alan laughed. "Remember this is New York—not the backwoods of Maine!"

Alan paused and smote his palm with a remorseful fist. "By the Eternal, I'm forgetting Barcus!"

"Barcus?"

"Chap whose boat I chartered in Portland—sheer luck on my part: he's one of the salt of the arth. First, something must be done for the boy. You've got influence of some sort in New Bedford, surely?"

Digby reflected: "Some. There's George Blaine, justice of the peace—"

"The very man. Telegraph him in Barcus' interests immediately. And telegraph Barcus as well—send him a hundred for expenses, and tell him to join me here in New York as quick as he can!"

"Your friend's address?" Digby inquired, mildly ironic as he sat down at the desk and fumbled with the supply of stationery.

"New Bedford jail, of course!" Alan chuckled—but cut his laugh in two as something fluttered from the pack of envelopes which Digby had disturbed and fell to the floor between the two men.

Face up, it grinned sardonic mockery of Alan's confidence: it was a trey of hearts.

With an ashen face and a trembling hand, Digby stooped to pick the damned thing up; but Alan was beforehand with him, and got his fingers first upon the card.

"Now will you believe?" Digby demanded huskily.

"In what? A simple coincidence?" Alan flouted. "Not I! Who knows I'm in New York—or that the Arthur Lawrence for whom your agent engaged these rooms was Alan Law. No, my friend: it's a bit too thick for me. Take my word for it, this is nothing more nor less than a souvenir of a poker-party held by yesterday's tenant of this suite."

"Perhaps—perhaps!" Digby assented, stroking tremulous lips. "But I'm afraid for you, my boy. Who knows that Trine's spies were not watching my man when he made this reservation? Who knows but that 'Arthur Lawrence' was too thin a disguise for Alan Law? I tell you, I'm frightened to the marrow of my old bones! Do me this favor at least, my boy: now that you've been warned, whether by accident or design—we won't argue that—do leave town—go incognito to some quiet place near by and wait there for the sailing of the next transatlantic steamer. Oh, surely you can't deny me this one wish of my fond old heart, my boy!"

With a gesture of unfeigned affection Alan dropped a hand on Digby's shoulder.

"There's nothing on earth I would not do for you," he said: "you've been a father and a mother to me ever since I can remember, even if we were separated, most of the time, by three thousand miles of salt water. But this thing—I can't do it, even for you. I can't do it even for myself. Rose Trine is here in New York, in the hands and at the mercy of her father and sister; and you may judge what their mercy will be when you learn all that she has done for me. I won't go and I can't go until I find her and take her with me. And that is final."

"Then," Digby struck in, grasping wildly at a straw of hope, "I have your word you'll go, providing I find and restore Rose to you?"

"You have my word to that, unquestionably. Bring Rose to me, and I'll gladly shake the dust of New York from my shoes, and never return till Trine is put away comfortably in his grave."

"It shall be done," Digby promised. "It must!"

"You believe that?"

"In twelve hours Rose shall be restored to you."

"Will you make a book on it? I'll bet you something happens—and hope I lose into the bargain. If you believe you can carry out your promise, wire the White Star line to reserve the best available suite on the Oceanic, sailing tomorrow morning at ten—and make arrangements for a marriage before the boat sails."

"I'll go you," Digby agreed: "and if I fail, I forfeit the cost of the reservation. But about this marriage—"

He hesitated.

"You'll have to have a license in this state—and can't get one except by applying in person with your bride-to-be. There won't be time—"

"Then we'll marry in Jersey!" Alan insisted. "Dig up some clergyman over there, if you don't know one yourself—"

"Oh, I'm well acquainted with the very man!"

HIGH SCHOOL BEATS CHARLEROI 31 TO 7 IN A GOOD CONTEST

Visitors are Outclassed, but Put Up a Plucky Battle.

THE LOCALS SHOW UP WELL

Shifts Made in Lineup to Give Second String Material a Chance to Shine. New Plays are Executed With Precision. Visitors Get Lucky Score.

Connellsville high played rings around Charleroi on Fayette Field Saturday afternoon winning by the score of 31 to 7. It was a pretty contest, Charleroi being the first team to put up a real game against the locals. The showing of the Connellsville eleven was encouraging and at the rate they are improving prospects of success against stronger teams seem bright.

If anything Charleroi outweighed Connellsville but their offense was very poor and their defense little better. Time after time Connellsville broke through and broke up plays before they were started and Leighty, Miller, Smeak, Crolley and Duggan had little trouble in going through for long gains.

A number of new plays were tried out, some different ways of pulling off forward passes being used and more ground was gained this way than at any time before this season. The only real criticism was the uncertainty in handling the ball, several fumbles being costly. Coach Springer has announced that work this week will be directed toward stopping this fumbling.

Leighty as usual starred. He was good for long runs and his gameness won him applause at more than one stage. In the second half he made a remarkable run after fumbling a kick, fighting off half of the Charleroi team before he was finally downed.

Frank Crolley used good judgment for the most part in directing his plays and also gave several nice exhibitions of open field running. [illegible] Duggan is developing into a splendid line bucker and his recovery of a fumble resulted in Connellsville's second touchdown. Dewey Miller is also showing up well in the backfield.

Considerable changes were made in the ends. Darr and Buttermore started the game but the former was taken out when his man was found to be too heavy for him, Baker taking his place. Cuneo and Martray also played ends during the game. Smeak, who began at center, was pulled back to fullback in the last quarter when a number of second string men were run in and he made several good gains.

Charleroi's touchdown was a lucky one. After failing to gain through the line or around the ends a forward pass was tried. The ball sailed into the hands of Dewey Miller but in attempting to catch it he knocked it into the arms of [illegible] who was downed on the [illegible] yard line. Spears took the ball over on a line plunge and then kicked a goal.

Connellsville's first touchdown was on a 20 yard run by Leighty after Charleroi had kicked and Miller recovered the ball. Leighty failed to kick the goal.

The second score came when [illegible] recovered a fumble on the [illegible] yard line. Crolley's [illegible] netted 10 yards and Leighty [illegible] more for a touchdown. He also kicked the goal.

The locals scored again a short time later on a long forward pass, Leighty to Baker, and Leighty's run. In the third quarter a recovered fumble by [illegible] on the [illegible] yard line gave Leighty opportunity for another run [illegible] a touchdown. Smeak failed to kick the goal. [illegible] Charleroi ends and a line plunge by Smeak netted Connellsville its sixth touchdown.

We've picked these from stock-broken assortments, one of a size, odds and ends. Some have Norfolk coats but the most of the collection is plain coat style. They make serviceable school suits, being standard Wright-Metzler quality. Sizes 6 to 17 years.

"Macanaw" is the New Coat.

for boys 5 to 17 years old. They are warm, light-weight and rain won't penetrate. Reefer length, belted and with wide collars. Colorings are rich and unusual and the patterns are plain, mixed or overplaid. Macanaws are $5 each, with a matched cap 5.50.

Other Style Coats For Boys

Long overcoats, reefers, Balmacaans and slip-ons for little fellows and big boys. Generally the garments have raglan sleeves, military or notch collars and most of them are rain-proofed. Plenty of gray tones and blue, brown and mixed effects. The fabrics are all-wool, soft or close woven, warm but not bulky and perfect all the way through. Priced $4. to $15.

New Hats Have Just Come In

Now we have almost a dozen decidedly different styles for the tot and boys 7 to 16 years old. Shepherd check woolens, plaid worsteds, plain velvets, corduroys and felts, plush, zibelines and novelty weaves. Crowns taper, are round, or telescoped and the brims turn down or tip at front or side. Bright feathers decorate some of the hats for tiny tots.

We've a fine assortment at 50c each, from that they go in easy stages, to 1.50.

Separate Trousers for Boys

—of corduroy, 50c and $1.00; lined serge $1.00 and 1.50; fancy serge, worsted, cheviot, cassimere and other weaves 50c, 75c to $2. Sizes are 3 to 18 years.
